Maine's Serio-Comedy. at the Augusta House—Assimilation of Discordant Elements.

An Augusta dispatch says: The play-wrights are missing an opportunity. There is the material for a popular comedy in this city of Augusta. Act one, scene first, should open in the dining room of the Augusta house, at the supper hour, when hungry Republicans and Fusionists sit down for their tea, toast and gossip. A traveler from New Zealand would never imagine that the capital of Maine was the scene of a Mexican muss. The tables are filled with the Fusionist officials and legislators, who elbow their Republican antagonists and get them to "pass the sugar." The much-arrested Major Folsom eats his steak with the appetite of a man who never read of drum head courts martial and the ringing volley of a death fusilade. Fusionist Governor Smith sits at the head of one of the tables with his cheerful spouse and daughter, two persons who fully recognize his title to the governorship. Near at hand Governor Davis sips his tea and chats with Fusionist friends, who call him

"Frank," but refuse to call him "Gov-house Senate, and the gold spectacled, benevolent gentleman who presides over the Fusionist House, both eat cuts from the same sirloid. There are some few radical fellows whose partisanship colors their every action, but in the main superabundance of "cool refreshing gin," doctored brandy and forty-rod whisky. Even the Sunday school men take something for their stomachs, A scientific observer of this Maine muss ascribes it all to a too exclusive diet of ice water and pic.

A community so fed is certainly fit for treason, stratagems and spoils. The Maine law, if repealed so far as malt liquors are concerned, and applied to pie and ice water, would restore the stability of the government. A sojourn among a mob
